Visual Workplace Seminar

presented by Oscar Roche-Management Resource Plus

Thursday 04th October, 2007

The Visual Workplace

In the words of Dr Gwendolyn Galsworth (Visual Lean Institute, Portland, Oregon), The Visual Workplace is:
"a comprehensive methodology for transforming the entire physical workspace and making work safer, simpler, more logical, more standardised, more fluid, more linked and far less costly –while ensuring that these outcomes are not just repeatable but sustainable."

We live in a world of images and design – visual cues are used everyday, from traffic lights to post-it notes. Visual indicators aim to instil a certain reaction – for a car to stop, or as a clear reminder. Visuality gets results quickly and effectively which in turn increases productivity and efficiency

The Visual Workplace is an important business tool which can ultimately lead to business excellence and world best practice. It can directly impact on the following areas:

- Business Efficiency
- Competitiveness
- Productivity
- Costs
- Waste Elimination

The key to the Visual Workplace is understanding what is meant by Visual Thinking, and having a workforce that can think visually. The impact of a Visual Workplace is even greater where there is a multilingual workforce or low levels of literacy.

The value of the Visual Workplace lies in its ability to transcend business size and type, from a small office to large manufacturing plant, school, hotel or hospital. Since vision is our most important sense, there is no person or company Visuality can not help!

A Visual Workplace focuses on processes. The implementation of Visuality results in the transfer of vital information into visual devices that then create exact behaviour, on time, every time. If you are a traditional manufacturer, hotel, school or hospital operator, Visuality will optimise your existing system. If you are on the lean journey, Visuality will not only enable your conversion but make those gains sustainable. Regardless, productivity will increase due to the elimination of waste.
